WHO ARE CATHOLIC SISTERS?

Western Pennsylvania is home to 17 congregations of women religious. Catholic sisters come in different "brands." They belong to a variety of religious communities or orders that each take on the characteristics of their founders and their founding traditions. All share similarities as Catholic sisters, yet have differences based on their origins and development.

Catholic sisters serve in many different ways. They are teachers in schools, universities and other settings. They do health care ministries through direct patient care and in administrative roles. Some sisters pray around the clock for all of us. Others work in social service agencies or parishes, as campus ministers or counselors, or foreign missions. Many sisters have special devotion to reaching out to persons who are poor or underserved. They witness through service, prayer and presence.

Catholic sisters are real people, too. They enjoy a good time, and they are generally characterized by happy spirits and peace of mind. They trust in the Lord and work wholeheartedly to serve God's people, especially those in need.

WHAT IS THE PRVC?

The Pittsburgh Religious Vocation Council (PRVC) is a collaborative effort of various women's and men's religious communities in the Pittsburgh area.
