Sister Rosemonde Deck began her musical training as a young child in a very musical family, under the tutelage of her mother, Gladys. She attended Divine Providence Academy, Larimer Avenue in Pittsburgh, where she later became a faculty member. After Sister Rosemonde and her blood sister, Sister Rosalie, joined the Sisters of Divine Providence in Pittsburgh they were educated at Duquesne University, where each obtained a Bachelor Degree in Music education and a Master of Music Degree. Both Sisters studied piano and later were trained in vocal performance. Sisters Rosemonde and Rosalie eventually became nationally and internationally known as the Singing Sisters.

Throughout her career, Sister Rosemonde taught music at Sacred Heart High School in Kingston, Massachusetts, including private piano lessons and vocal performance. Currently, Sister Rosemonde resides at Providence House in Kingston.
